► Welcoming Messages

Welcome to the International Symposium on Work Injury Prevention and Rehabilitation 2010 in Guangzhou!

The first two international symposia on work injury prevention and rehabilitation were held in 2005 and 2008, respectively. Sharing of academics from different countries and districts in the previous symposia did not only broaden our knowledge and insight, but also substantially enhanced the development of work injury prevention and rehabilitation in the mainland China. The enthusiasm and motivation of participants facilitated the proceed of the symposia, and the events successfully served as a platform for exchanges of opinions, stimulation of cooperation among professionals, and building of friendship.

In recent years there was a rapid development on occupational rehabilitation in the mainland China, and yet work injury prevention and occupational rehabilitation are still new topics to the territories. As work injury prevention is the basis of protection to workers' health and safety, there is an urge for local professionals to come up with effective recommendations, which could reduce work injury cases and mobilize the government to get the industries and workers involved in the work injury prevention initiatives. On the other hand, occupational rehabilitation also requires the involvement and support of the government and work industries. In addition to medical interventions, labour insurance policies, society conditions, attitudes of industries, psychosocial adjustment of injured workers are all interrelated issues in occupational rehabilitation. Therefore, the study of occupational rehabilitation should include all aspects from rehabilitation techniques to policy making and culture and talent cultivation.

In the Guangzhou symposium in 2005, participants mainly addressed topics on rehabilitation in the medical aspects. Topics were extended further to include the experiences and development of occupational rehabilitation in different countries and districts in the 2008 Changsha symposium. In this year, we will again put together three main aspects - work injury prevention, medical rehabilitation and occupational rehabilitation. We hope the interaction of participants will stimulate all-round development of work injury prevention and rehabilitation in China.

I believe the coming international symposium on work injury prevention and rehabilitation in Guangzhou will again be a valuable opportunity for academic advancement, networking and friendship building!

Dr. Tang Dan

Chairperson, Organizing Committee, International Symposium on Work Injury Prevention and Rehabilitation 2010
Director, Guangdong Provincial Work Injury Rehabilitation Center

Occupational injuries are still plaguing the world, especially the development countries including China, which is the biggest production base of consumer products in the world. Every morning when we read the newspapers, we are bound to come across reports of various kinds of serious occupational accidents, with some of them killing more than one worker and appearing in the headlines.

Every single occupational injury represents failure on the part of occupational health and safety professionals in their pledge to protect workers health. It is also unethical that workers have to risk their health or lives in order to sustain their livelihoods.

While admitting our failure in preventing workers from injuries, injured workers do need to be well taken care of, so that the undesirable consequences can be minimized and they are back to optimal functioning at work and at home as soon as possible.

The International Symposium on Work Injury Prevention and Rehabilitation to be held in Guangzhou, China this November provides an excellent platform for the exchange of practice experiences and research findings among occupational health and rehabilitation professionals, inside and outside China, for the common goal of protecting workers health and preventing disabilities.

The first of this series of symposium started in 2005 when professionals, mainly from Hong Kong and Guangzhou, shared their experiences on work injury rehabilitation. The second symposium in 2008 expanded the scope to cover work injury prevention, with more participants from various parts of China, but still remained essentially a Mainland - Hong Kong exchange. The success of previous symposia prompted the move of the 2010 symposium to an international level, so that professionals from outside China can actively participate and interact with colleagues in China.

Dr. Ignatius Tak-sun YU

Chairperson, Scientific Committee, International Symposium on Work Injury Prevention and Rehabilitation 2010
Professor and Associate Director, School of Public Health and Primary Care, The Chinese University of Hong Kong

► Speakers

Keynote Speakers

Mr. Chen Gang, Director of the Work Injury Insurance Department in the Ministry of Human Resource and Social Security of the People's Republic of China, has always been devoted to the development of Work Injury Insurance of China. He took part in the institution of a number of statutes such as the Labor Law when he was serving as the Director of Policy and Regulation Department in the former Ministry of Labor. He also served as the chief editor for several publications, including the Work Injury Insurance and Guidelines for Standard of Appraisal of Labor Capability, and paid much focus on the theoretical research of work injury insurance. Recently Mr. Chen was dedicated to the reformation of Work Injury Insurance of China from sole compensation to a comprehensive hence internationally articulated system which combines the elements of prevention, compensation and rehabilitation.

Dr. Kazutaka Kogi, Research Adviser of the Institute for Science of Labour (ISL) in Kawasaki, has been active in occupational health and ergonomics at international level. After graduating from the University of Tokyo Faculty of Medicine in 1957, he conducted applied research at ISL until 1983 when he joined the International Labour Office as Regional Adviser for Asia and the Pacific, stationed in Bangkok. During 1988-1993, he worked at the ILO headquarters in Geneva as Chief of the Occupational Safety and Health Branch and Director of the Working Conditions and Environment Department. He then served as Director of the Institute for Science of Labour during 1993-1999. Currently he is President of the International Commission on Occupational Health (ICOH) for the tenure 2009-2012. His major areas of interest are workload and fatigue assessment and practical improvement of workplace conditions including participatory ergonomics. Working in technical cooperation projects for developing countries, he developed training packages for work improvements in small enterprises and in agriculture. He is particularly interested in the application of participatory and cost-effective occupational health approaches including low-cost solutions.

Prof. Volker Bühren is the medical director of the BG Trauma Clinic Murnau. He engaged in medical study at Hanover Medical School and St. Georges Medical School London. Prof. Bühren was the professor for Surgery Homburg University in 1989 and he took over as the director of Trauma Department Homburg University Medical School in 1990 to 1992. He has been the director of BG Trauma Center Murnau since 1993. He was also the president of Bavarian Society of Surgery in 2002, the president OTC Germany and the vice-president OTC Foundation in 2007. Prof. Bühren's special interests included trauma management, spine surgery, intramedullary nailing and reconstruction surgery.

Prof. Allen N. Lewis, Jr., Ph.D., CRC, is the Associate Professor and Chair of the VCU Department of Rehabilitation Counseling in the School of Allied Health Professions. He earned his doctorate in Education with an emphasis in health services research and leadership from Virginia Commonwealth University in 1996. He also joined the VCU faculty in 1996. Dr. Lewis has conducted more than 60 refereed and invited presentations and workshops regionally, nationally and internationally over the past five years on topics related to his research interests: (1) the influence of culture on the disability experience and (2) evaluating the effectiveness of rehabilitation services. He has written more than 35 publications (refereed journal articles, book chapters, abstracts and technical reports). Dr. Lewis is a principal investigator on more than $2.5 million dollars in grant funding. Dr. Lewis serves on the editorial board for the Journal of Vocational Rehabilitation and is an ad hoc reviewer for the Journals of Black Psychology, Adolescent and Family Health, and Spinal Cord Medicine. Dr. Lewis has had a longstanding commitment to working in the health and disability arena for 26 years, 11 years at VCU as an applied social sciences researcher, professor and administrator and 15 years of experience prior to coming to VCU as a services practitioner, program administrator, program evaluator, and services researcher.

Prof. Karen Jacobs, Ed.D., OTR/L, CPE, FAOTA, is the Clinical Professor and Program Director of Distance Education Post-professional Occupational Therapy Programs of Boston University, College of Health and Rehabilitation Sciences: Sargent College Department of Occupational Therapy. She is responsible for the instruction of undergraduate & graduate level occupational therapy, physical therapy, and health and rehabilitation sciences courses, and the development and implementation of distance education graduate courses in occupational therapy and physical therapy. Her specialty includes ergonomics, assistive technology, educational theory & practice and health care management. Since 1990, she is the founding editor of the interdisciplinary, international, peer-reviewed journal, WORK: A Journal of Prevention, Assessment & Rehabilitation.

Mr. Hannu Alen is a civil servant and working now as Ministerial Advisor in the Policy Unit of the Occupational Health and Safety Department in the Ministry of Social Affairs and Health in Finland. Mr. Alen is a chemical engineer and his main job is on the prevention of major accident hazards. He is the Member of Community of Competent Authorities whom responsible for the implementation of directive 96/82/EC on the Control of Major-Accident Hazards Involving Dangerous Substances (SEVESO II Directive).
